Mother Bird is welcoming her five baby birds to the world. Everything seems to be going great, but baby bird number 5 is taking its time to achieve the milestones that all its siblings seem to easily do - hatching from the egg, growing its wings or learning how to fly and leaving the nest. As a late bloomer, baby bird number 5 is getting harsh comments from everyone around, asking when the little bird is finally ready. But Mother Bird is calm and answers the question with the simple answer: it needs a little more time.

Polly's chicken goes to heaven

- Speaks about the loss of a pet in a child-appropriate way
- Touching story with adorable main character Polly

Polly and her pet Chicken Bratbecker are best friends and love to spend time together. But one day Chicken Bratbecker falls ill and eventually passes away. After this great loss, Polly and her mother decide to bury Chicken Bratbecker in her toy box, create a cross and sing to it one last time. This story follows Polly, as she asks all the important questions about losing someone you love. Polly creates her own way with which she deals with the passing of her friend Chicken and establishes her own pet cemetery for deceased and missing animals. Through this she gains the strength to imagine a good life in heaven for Bratbecker.

Lars is really excited. He is taking part in the big play at school. He has been practicing a lot with his friend Lina, but when the time finally comes, he suddenly feels very funny. So he has to go to the quiet room to rest.

A clever phage suddenly appears and explains Lars all sorts of things about his body. Why can we walk upright at all? What exactly does the heart do and what does blood have to do with it? Why do we turn white when we feel sick? Lars learns this and much more and when he feels better again, the play can finally begin!

FREI - A summer that will last

- Coming-of-age story about a 14-year-old boy in search of friends and a home
- New series: authentic, moving, funny
- Superbly written by bestselling author Sarah Welk !

Joshua is 14 years old and has already lived in eleven cities with his mothers. Berlin, Vienna, Naples, Hamburg ... and now: Rottloch. A one-horse town where the 8-year-olds drive tractors and the local hunter's club meets regularly in the only pub on the square. And because the local school has some kind of special educational concept, Joshua now seriously has to spend a week making his way through the forest with a bunch of strangers. Okay, there are maps and destinations and a fixed overnight stop every evening - but you have to find them first!

And how on earth is that supposed to work with Nico, Koray, Nasrin and Nina - one more eccentric than the other? Although - Nina is actually quite okay. Well, at least for an innkeeper's daughter...

This handy little guide portrays the environment throughout the year, season by season, to show children the fascinating nature they live in. With many ideas to spend time outside building for example an insect hotel or learn to differentiate between trees and recognize animals by their prints in the snow. Each month starts with an explorer's checklist, asking the children to go on a discovery and look for animal prints, new flowers or listen which birds they can find. Perfect companion book for every little adventurer or nature lover!
